Response to the Non-Criminal Barricade: Disengagement & Special Relationships®

December 27, 2022
O'Fallon, MO

Hosted by the St. Charles County Police Department

St Charles County Police Department Training Room
101 Sheriff Dierker Ct., O'Fallon, MO 63366

Instructor: Sgt. Donald Anderson, San Francisco Police Department

$268/student

This course teaches law enforcement officers and supervisors the best way to respond to mentally ill persons who are armed, barricaded, and in crisis. You'll leave the course with an understanding of modern disengagement and re-engagement tactics, the specific ways to avoid liability, and a collection of the best non-criminal barricade policies from police agencies all around the country.

This course breaks down the relevant laws that govern liability, "special relationships", and the "public duty doctrine". Through dramatic bodycam debriefs of actual non-criminal barricade incidents, you will learn why some officers were found liable and others were not. You will walk away with modern tactics your agency can use to both limit liability and prevent violent confrontations.

This course is open to law enforcement officers and other public safety agency affiliated personnel.

Each student will receive:

- ✓ A simple three-page decision making cheat sheet to help guide your decision making regarding when to engage, disengage and re-engage.
- ✓ A collection of non-criminal barricade policies from progressive police agencies around the U.S.
- ✓ The specific laws you need to know to keep yourself and your agency on solid legal ground.

Your instructor, Donald Anderson, is an active-duty Lieutenant with the San Francisco Police Department. Donald is an experienced law enforcement professional who regularly responds to critical incidents, including barricade subjects, as a Team Leader on the department's Crisis Negotiation Team. Donald has not only studied best practices for responding to non-criminal barricades but is also a real-world practitioner, frequently responding to such incidents. He is an experienced trainer who is passionate about helping police officers navigate these challenging incidents and saving lives.
