This course teaches law enforcement officers and supervisors the best way to respond to mentally ill persons who are armed, barricaded, and in crisis. You'll leave the course with an understanding of modern disengagement and re-engagement tactics, the specific ways to avoid liability, and a collection of the best non-criminal barricade policies from police agencies all around the country.

Each student will receive:

- ✓ An understanding of your state's laws regarding the public duty doctrine, special relationships, liability, and duty
- ✓ A decision-making cheat sheet for disengagement
- ✓ Policies, a police report template, and a script to use to sever special relationships

This course breaks down the relevant laws that govern liability, "special relationships", and the "public duty doctrine". You will walk away with modern tactics your agency can use to both limit liability and prevent violent confrontations.
