Being a probation officer is a tough job. You try to focus on compassion and rehabilitation, but still have to worry about fentanyl, gangs, ghost guns, and all the other issues police officers deal with. The difference is many probation officers aren't getting the same high-quality training that is provided to police officers.

Field contacts and home visits can often involve dangerous individuals and compromising situations. We think probation officers deserve modern and effective training that will help keep you safe. That's why we are thrilled to present an 8-hour, info-packed seminar just for probation officers like you. You will leave this seminar with a new confidence in how to make your field contacts and home visits safe and effective.

Instructor Adam Noto's goal is to build your confidence in your decision-making and problem-solving skills in the field.

Curriculum Includes:

- ✔ Pre-contact Assessments:
Doing your homework before the contact.
- ✔ Locating contraband and how to decide when to exit the residence.
- ✔ Residence/vehicle searches and field arrests
- ✔ Effective forms of communication:
Verbal and non-verbal
- ✔ Using technology to your advantage
- ✔ Off-duty personal safety principles

Adam Noto is a 26-year veteran of the Santa Clara County Probation Department, Adult Division in California with extensive experience in field supervision of probationers. His previous experiences include full time assignment to the San Jose Police Department's Covert Response Unit, 4 years supervising sex offenders, 22 years of high risk intensive supervision and ultimately 8 years as an armed officer where he supervised gang members. He is the graduate of several specialized tactical training courses and now teaches the same officer-safety concepts to other probation officers.
